COME TO THE SOUTH.

Oh, come to the South, sweet, beautiful one, 'Tis the shrine of the sun; Where the sky ever shines with a passionate glow.

And flowers spread their treasure of crimson and snow; Where the breezes, o'er bright waters, wafts incense along.

And gay birds are glancing in beauty and song; Where the summer smiles e'er o'er mountain and plain, And the best gifts of Eden, unshadowed, remain.

Oh, come to the South, The shrine of the sun; And dwell in its bowers, Sweet, beautiful one.

Oh, come to the South, and I'll build thee a home, Where winter shall never intrusively come, The queen-like catapala the myrtle and pine, The gold-fruited orange, the ruby-gemmed vine.

Shall bloom round thy dwelling and shade thee at noon, While the birds of all music keep anxious tune, By the gush of glad fountains we'll rest us at eve, No trouble to vex us, no sorrows to grieve.

Oh, come to the South, The shrine of the sun, And dwell in its bowers, Sweet, beautiful one.

Oh, come to the South, 'tis the home of the heart, No sky like its own can deep passion impart;

The glow of its summer is felt in the soul, The shrine of the sun, And dwell in its bowers, Sweet, beautiful one.

And life pass away like some delicate dream, Each wish of thy heart should be realized, And this beautiful land seem an Eden to thee.

Then, come to the South, The shrine of the sun; And dwell in its bowers, Sweet, beautiful one.

PERSIMMON BLOSSOMS

Sweet meets—two fond lovers in a first embrace. After Washington had crossed the Delaware, the enemy, oh! Delaware was he?

There have been a good many fires lately. Do girls, be careful about your sparks.

Why is your wife like dynamite? Because she's apt to blow you up if harshly handled.

'Don't let's have any words about it,' as the man said when he lodged the dictionary his wife threw at him.

A worn-out parent in Chicago has named his baby Macbeth, because his hat murdered sleep.

'Let's go and catch Tweed!' is the way the New York men about town asks a friend to partake a social glass.

The most glowing passages in a minister's sermon will attract scarcely half the attention that centres on the man who blows his nose in church.

A Pennsylvania father, ninety years of age, boxed his son's ears severely for abusing his wife. The boy is sixty.

'Old age is coming upon me rapidly,' as the urethra said when he was stealing apples from an old man's garden, and saw the owner coming, with whip in hand.

'Will this pipe smoke free?' asked a gentleman who was purchasing a pipe. 'Of course it will, if you can get your tobacco for nothing,' was the reply.

A stout old woman got mad the other day because the photographer would not let her fan herself while she had her picture taken.

A fop, in company, wanting his servant called out. 'Where's that block-head of mine?' 'On your shoulders, sir,' said the lady.

'I am going to the Post Office, Bob, shall I inquire for you?' 'Well, yes, if you have a mind to, but don't think you will find me there.'

'Mamma,' said a little girl, 'can a door speak?' 'Certainly not, my love.' 'Then, why did you tell Anna to answer the door this morning?'

A man seeing 'a sure way of preventing bad dreams' advertised, sent his dollar for the remedy and in return received a printed slip, saying, 'Be careful you do not go to sleep.'

Scene at a Virginia railroad depot Two warm-hearted F. F. V. a bidding each other good-bye.

Percy, this parting seems like its mighty hard.

Oh, its a heap worse than hard, Plantagement—its bitter, its bitter.

Have you any last request to make?

Yes, said Percy, the tears coming into his eyes, give me a chew of tobacco.—Brooklyn Argus.

Those Sad Leaves.—She, a girl of seventeen, walked under the maples a month ago and said:

'O, leaves, ye remind me of crushed hopes and scattered plans. He, her father, found them in a nail keg, the other day, and shook them down in a corner of the shed and said:

There, that dog has got just as good a bed as any canine in this town.—Detroit Free Press.

Too Ex travagant.

'Can I take one o' them yer splinters?' inquired a frontiersman, pointing to the box of wooden toothpicks in a Chicago restaurant the other day.

'Certainly, sir,' replied the polite cashier.

The man took one, and backing off a few steps—using it the while indelicately—soon returned, and carefully depositing it from whence it came, remarked to the amazed cashier, complacently:

'I don't see how yer can 'ford'er keep them things. I notice so many folks take 'em off an' never bring 'em back!'

And as he marched out of doors with the expression of a man conscious of having performed an honest act, the cashier emptied the toothpick box under the counter, with disgust marked on his every feature.
